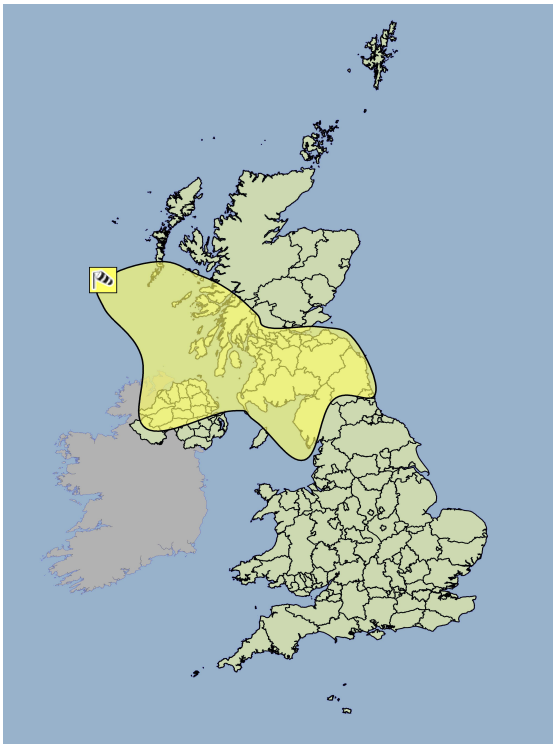
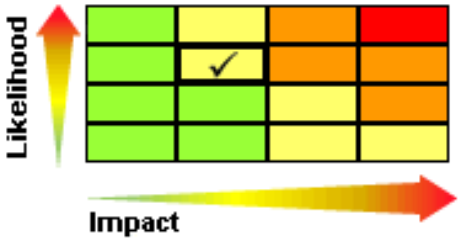
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
An Atlantic depression will move east across Northern Scotland on Wednesday, bringing a swathe of strong winds on its southern flank affecting southern and central Scotland as well as parts of Northern Ireland and northern England. Frequent showers or some longer spells of rain may lead to some localised surface water flooding, given the very wet state of the ground.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Wind

Valid from 12:00 on Wed, 18th Nov 2015 until 03:00 on Thu, 19th Nov 2015

Southwesterly gales will develop on Wednesday, these becoming severe in exposed areas during the afternoon and evening. Gusts of 50-60 mph are likely over coasts and more exposed inland areas with gusts of 60- 70 mph possible around the coasts of western Scotland and the north coast of Northern Ireland. The winds will veer westerly in the evening before easing in the early hours of Wednesday. Heavy, blustery showers or some longer spells of rain could also lead to some surface water flooding on the roads especially over parts of western Scotland.

Be aware of difficult driving conditions and the risk of some minor travel disruption on roads and to ferries.
